On its face the magazine presents as having a legitimate purpose as a naturist lifestyle magazine. However, the predominant focus on children and young people as photographic subjects presents as an unbalanced representation of participants in the naturist lifestyle. Further, some images appear to be out of place or gratuitous, as they have little or no relationship to the text. Such images are dispersed throughout the magazine, and appear to have no purpose other than to capture reader attention. Overall the stories present as artificially constructed frames in which to locate images of naked boys and girls. While the simple style of writing indicates an intended readership of young people, the magazine is unlikely to appeal to children, and items such as the reader puzzle indicate that the magazine is rather intended for an adult readership. In combination these matters create significant ambiguity as to the purpose of the magazine, and diminish its apparent legitimate purpose. The extent and focus of child nudity in the magazine indicates an appeal to a broader readership than naturists, including adults who may find depictions of naked boys and girls titillating.

Consideration has been given to the relevant provisions of the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990 as they relate to this publication. The Classification Office considers that the limit on the freedom of expression resulting from this classification is reasonable and demonstrably justifiable, given the manner in which, and extent to which, the magazine exploits the nudity of children and young persons.
